

Name _____

Date _____

Conventions: Avoid Double Negative

The words no, not, never, nothing are negative words. When two negatives are used in the same sentence, it is called a double negative. A double negative is incorrect because it confuses the meaning.

Example:

I don't have no homework.

I don't have any homework.

Underline two double negative sentences in each one, then fix them below.

Paragraph 1

The Book of Kells is about 1,200 years old. It is decorated with colorful illustrations and detailed designs. The monks made it all by hand because there weren't no printing presses back then. It's almost unbelievable that such a fragile book has survived through wars and centuries of change. Honestly, there's no way nobody could look at it without being amazed.

Paragraph 2

Last summer, my family went camping in the mountains. It was amazing! We hiked during the day and roasted marshmallows at night. The stars were so bright, and there was almost no noise at all. I felt so peaceful. But one night, I couldn't hardly sleep because an owl kept hooting near our tent. Even though I was tired the next day, I wouldn't never forget that trip.

Name _____

Date _____

Conventions: Avoid Double Negative – Answer Key

The words no, not, never, nothing are negative words. When two negatives are used in the same sentence, it is called a double negative. A double negative is incorrect because it confuses the meaning.

Example:

I don't have no homework.

I don't have any homework.

Underline two double negative sentences in each one, then fix them below.

Paragraph 1

The Book of Kells is about 1,200 years old. It is decorated with colorful illustrations and detailed designs. The monks made it all by hand because there weren't no printing presses back then. It's almost unbelievable that such a fragile book has survived through wars and centuries of change. Honestly, there's no way nobody could look at it without being amazed. anyone could look at it without being amazed.

Paragraph 2

Last summer, my family went camping in the mountains. It was amazing! We hiked during the day and roasted marshmallows at night. The stars were so bright, and there was almost no noise at all. I felt so peaceful. But one night, I couldn't hardly sleep because an owl kept hooting near our tent. Even though I was tired the next day, I wouldn't never forget that trip. I would never forget that trip.