Combining Sentences to Make Sentences Flow

Combining sentences is a key skill that helps writers create smooth, engaging, and clear texts. It allows ideas to flow naturally, avoids unnecessary repetition, and enhances the readability of a piece. Here are some effective strategies for combining sentences:

- Using Coordinating or Subordinating Conjunctions
- Using Relative Clauses
- Using Appositives
- Using Participial Phrases
- Using Compound Subjects or Verbs

Read the two drafts below on the same topic . Rewrite them to combine partial sentences and make the sentences in the draft flow smoothly.

Draft 1:

Teamwork is important in sports. It helps players achieve their goals. When players work together, they can share ideas and solve problems. Good teamwork builds trust among teammates. It also encourages communication. For example, during a soccer game, players need to pass the ball effectively. They also need to coordinate their movements to defend against the opposing team. Without teamwork, it would be difficult for a team to succeed. Teamwork not only helps a team win but also teaches valuable life skills. These skills include cooperation, patience, and respect for others.

Draft 2:

Teamwork is not just for sports; it is also important in school and everyday life. In school projects, students need to work together to divide tasks and complete assignments. Strong teamwork helps students finish projects on time and ensures everyone contributes equally. Outside of school, teamwork is important in families. Family members work together to solve problems, such as deciding how to spend their weekend or sharing chores. At work, teamwork is essential for collaborating with coworkers and meeting deadlines. Good teamwork helps people build stronger relationships. It also leads to better results in many aspects of life.
