

Name _____

Date _____

Join the Predicate of Similar Sentences

Using a mix of short and long sentences and different types of sentences makes writing more interesting and easy to read. Short sentences grab attention, while long sentences add detail. Using different types of sentences—statements, questions, and exclamations—also adds variety.

Read each pair of sentences, Combine their predicates to create one sentence.

1. A reporter asks questions. A reporter writes about the answers.

2. Mr. Flay is a reporter. He writes for the newspaper.

3. The dog barked loudly. The dog ran to the door.

4. My sister loves to paint. My sister enjoys drawing pictures of animals.

5. The kids played on the swings. The kids laughed happily.

6. Dad cooked dinner. Dad cleaned the kitchen after dinner.

Name _____

Date _____

Join the Predicate of Similar Sentences – Answer Key

Using a mix of short and long sentences and different types of sentences makes writing more interesting and easy to read. Short sentences grab attention, while long sentences add detail. Using different types of sentences—statements, questions, and exclamations—also adds variety.

Read each pair of sentences, Combine their predicates to create one sentence.

1. A reporter asks questions. A reporter writes about the answers.

A reporter asks questions and writes about the answers.

2. Mr. Flay is a reporter. He writes for the newspaper.

Mr. Flay is a reporter and writes for the newspaper.

3. The dog barked loudly. The dog ran to the door.

The dog barked loudly and ran to the door.

4. My sister loves to paint. My sister enjoys drawing pictures.

My sister loves to paint and enjoys drawing pictures.

5. The kids played on the swings. The kids laughed happily.

The kids played on the swings and laughed happily.

6. Dad cooked dinner. Dad cleaned the kitchen after dinner.

Dad cooked dinner and cleaned the kitchen after dinner.